

The Adult Summer Reading Club theme this year is “Novel Destinations,” referring to the fact that our reading takes us, mentally and intellectually, all over the world. Your book does not have to be a novel; as always, both fiction and nonfiction books are acceptable and encouraged.

So, to spice things up, every time you submit a book read, you will be asked for the country (or, if U.S. or Canada, the state or province) that your book was about or where it took place.

Sometimes a book will take place in more than one location - please choose just one. On the other end of the spectrum, a book’s setting could be imaginary, non-specific, or universal. In that case, we will leave it up to you to choose the place it’s most like, or to just leave this field blank.

Every week, there will be an updated map on the club’s website that will show all the places our reading has taken us. It will be cumulative throughout the summer.

If you need reading suggestions to take you to faraway, or not so faraway, places, click on “Where shall I read?”.
